Senator T. S. Martin speaks Buckingham Tuesday 13th.

Hon. Jos. R. Willard will speak at the Academy of Music, Lynchburg tomorrow night (8).

Vote in the primary for the man of your own choice. Any other course would be moral cowardice.

Buckingham Circuit court commences on next Tuesday. The politicians will be expected to extend the glad hand on that day.

Richmond Times Dispatch says: "The primary is on trial, and the good name of the Democratic party of Virginia is at stake. There can be no sort of excuse or pretext for trickery or cheating. It is a family fight, a contest among gentlemen, and it would be an everlasting disgrace to the party if the election should be tainted with fraud. In the name of Virginia Democracy, in the name of pure politics and honest government, in the name of Southern honor and chivalry, let us have an election that shall be fair and honest and above suspicion.

Hon. Willard Stands at Home

It gives us pleasure to present to our readers a statement in regard to the relations sustained by Hon. J. E. Willard to his home and the people of Fairfax, where he resides. This statement made by the Clerk of Fairfax Circuit Court has been deemed proper by reason of the many erroneous reports that have been circulated, designed to injure him among those who are not acquainted with the circumstances. The following letter was addressed to a friend:

Fairfax, Va., May 15, 1905.

My Dear Sir: In answer to yours of the 13th inst. will say that Capt. Joseph E. Willard is a Steward in the M. E. Church, South, at this place, and has been for some time. He is also one of the Trustees and trustee of said church at Merrifield this county.

Captain Willard has always been very active in the cause and for some time conducted a mission in connection with said church at Jermantown, near here.

He is now and always has been the largest contributor to said church and to the preacher's salary.

He has not only helped his own church (the church here where he now holds his membership, but constantly helps in a liberal way many other churches of this and other denominations in this and other counties. He is frequently called upon to help the churches and never turns them down. I really do not know what his church here would do without him.

I know who root I speak, being a member and trustee of said church for many years.

In addition to church work Capt. Willard organized and equipped at his own expense, Company I, 3rd Virginia Volunteers in the war with Spain.

He served five terms in the Legislature from this county, and could have been returned just as long as he desired to be, the county always cheerfully supporting him in his political ambition.

He gave us a town hall, costing about $7,000. Our Masonic lodge meets in said hall, Capt. Willard being a member of the lodge.

He gave in cold cash $25 000 and did not take any bonds or stock for same to-wards building the electric road to this place, which is the best thing that ever happened here.

We are all strong Willard men in Fairfax and expect him to be our next governor, and you bet he will make a good one and will be heard from.

Yours very truly,
F. W. Richardson.

If you want to know who we are ask the Editor of this paper, he will tell you, or write to some of the successful farmers and stock raisers whose testimonials we have in the little catalogue telling you all about the "SMITH SILO."

SMITH & REPPENHER,
Westminster, Md.

A Fable of the "Martin" and the "Woodpecker."

A "Martin" had lived for many years in comfortable nest under the eaves of a barn. A "Woodpecker" flying by one day observed this nest and fancied it. He forthwith said to the Martin, "I like your nest, fly away and yield it to me."

The Martin replied that he too, liked the nest and, therefore, refused to fly away. "Very well," said the Woodpecker, "if you refuse to yield me the nest I will assemble our feathered friends and by before them your unreasonable conduct, and appeal to them to turn you out."

Accordingly a great concourse of the birds of the air assembled. The Woodpecker presented himself before his neighbors and spoke thus: "Friends you are assembled in order that I might lay before you a most remarkable case. You all know of the comfortable nest under the eaves of yonder barn. Behold, it is occupied by a Martin. I peremptorily ordered him to fly away and yield the nest to me. Would you believe it, he had the insolence to refuse, will you tolerate such audacity in a plain Martin? He is never seen away from his nest in public places, he gives his entire time to doing small services to his neighbors, nor is his voice ever heard in the land. Moreover, he is a bird of plain plumage. You all know me. I have had a conspicuous nest and fed at the public crib for many years. I have flitted incessantly from wood to wood and chirped to you in big, round public voice from every stump. Besides, I am a handsome bird and was beautiful, red feathers in my head."

The assembled birds named a day when a decision could be reached, and on the evening of that day it was decided that the Martin had been a quiet, industrious and useful neighbor, serving his community without glitter or ostentation, and he should keep the nest.

MORAL: Let not ambition and presumption masquerade as merit."

The above fable is being distributed broadcast by the friends of Senator Martin as a campaign document. It has already been published in several Martin papers. The fable is more remarkable for what it does not say than for what it does say. It is as silent as the Great Sphinx of Egypt and as covert as to how the "Martin" got possession of the nest in 1900, a question which is now deeply interesting the public. We fancy the writer is a scholar and well remembered Bill Shakespeare's pet maxim, "The least said the soonest mended."

It suggests to us the following fable we once heard whose accents, doubtless, are familiar to the ears of many patriotic Virginians. It is as follows:

A FABLE OF THE "EAGLE," THE "MARTIN" AND THE "WOODPECKER."

An "Eagle" was a candidate to represent the birds of the air at a convention where laws were to be made for their government. A vast majority of the birds favored the "Eagle." The candidate was to be selected by a committee of birds. This committee was largely dominated by "Vultures," "Hawks," "Buzzards," and "Crows," who hypnotized many innocent birds into voting contrary to their convictions, and in some instances against instructions by methods which have never been explained. They knew their constituents' desired the "Eagle," for the "Eagle" was brave, and in the days of battle had fought gallantry for his feathered comrades. Yet the "Martin," an unknown bird, by lining the nests of the committees was given the honor, and now "peremptorily" claims this public nest as his private property, regardless of the rights of the feathered tribe. The "Martin" took care to have this nest built with surgical skill, under the eaves of the barn used the corn crib, and not in the open where the brave "Martins" habitate and build.

"We must never let this commit-tee choose for us again" said the "Woodpeck-r." "But we will have an election in which all the birds can vote." This was adopted much to the disgust of the "Martin," and his friends, who secretly schemed against the plan of allowing all the birds to vote.

Time rolled on and another election came. The grand old "Eagle" was dead, and amid the funeral songs of the "Nightingales" and "Mocking birds" was laid to rest. When all the birds were through voting the "Woodpecker" had overwhelmingly defeated the "Martin" and the grand old "Eagle" was avenged.

MORAL: Let not intrigue and trickery masquerade as Patriotism and Statesmanship.—South Boston News, May 25, 1905.

Confessed Election Frauds.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 31.—Influenced by a sermon which he heard from the lips of Rev. Sam Jones, the evangelist, William S Keller today decided to confess his part in election rottenness.

The Knox county judgeship is now being contested in a civil court on a charge of election bribery, etc Keller had since been on the stand and had twice refused to answer certain pointed questions. Today he again appeared and voluntarily asked to testify.

The privilege was granted him and he then told, amid dramatic scenes, how he, as officer of election had stuffed the ballott box in the Eleventh ward, had marked between two and three hundred votes for the straight Democratic ticket, and had shoved them into the box.

In his confession he also implicated several city officials for alleged parts that they had played in trying to cover up evidences of the rottenness by adding names to the poll lists of the ward to make them conform to the votes polled.

Appomattox Girl Married in Lynchburg.

A pretty home wedding took place Wednesday evening, May 31, at 8 o'clock at 1119 Main St., the residence of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Lavinder, when Miss Naunie Cyrus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jno. W. Cyrus of Concord, became the bride of Mr. T. L. Dearing of this place. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. H. Athey, of College Hill Baptist church. The ushers were Miss Bessie Staples and Mr. Sammy Lavinder, Miss Rose Holyman and Mr. Charlie North, Miss Melva Cyrus and Mr John Dearing. The flower girls were little Misses Mary Virginia Lavinder and Eva Alice Cyrus. The bride was beautifully attired in blue mull with white chiffon trimmings and carried white carnations. A number of friends and relatives assembled to witness the nuptials. The bride is a daughter of Mrs. J. W. Cyrus, one of Appomattox's oldest daughters, and Mr. Dearing is a son of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Dearing of this place. The groom is a popular young business man of Lynchburg, and the bride is a charming young lady. They left on the evening train for Washington, D. C., and other points of interest. Upon their return they will be at home to their friends at 1119 Main St., Lynchburg, Va.

Why Suffer From Rheumatism?

Why suffer from rheumatism when one application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hong only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after awhile the relief became permanent. Mrs. Ceth Leggett, Lynn Junction, Tennessee, U. S. A., writes, "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism in all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will bring the pain. For sale by J. R. Wood, Appomattox, R. J. Dr. E. A. Craighill,
LYNCHBURG, Va.
Dear Sir:—
Both MONA LIVER TONIC was prescribed by a physician in my family some six years ago, and our house has never been without it since to my knowledge. It is the best all around liver and kidney tonic I ever used. Without reservation I consider it the best all around liver tonic that can be taken. It is also invaluable in indigestion, constipation, dyspepsia and sick headache. Without exception from a logical liver, I cannot say too much in favor of MONA LIVER TONIC. Very respectfully, (Signed) H. C. HANCOCK, Commissioner of Revenue Appomattox County.
